Safeguard Your Family's Future

MOST people looking into the future can see a time at which they are going to need for some purpose or other a definite sum of money. It may be for the higher education or business development of their sons or daughters. It requires money to obtain a college education, not a large amount, but an amount that is quite possible for the average home to provide if some systematic method is adopted for accumulating by investment the necessary funds before they are actually needed.

Young men and young women require some more or less compulsory system of accumulating by investment a definite sum of money. Make up your mind to have at least $1,000 in hard cash at a definite time. The plan you adopt now can be the basis of a comfortable fortune.

Commercial Life Prudence Bonds give you an absolutely guaranteed plan by which the above objects can be attained.

Fill in and return the coupon or call at our office and we will be glad to give you full particulars without considering you under any obligation whatever.

SCENARIO

The scene is a street in front of the Palace of the Sultan. The Populace are returning to their homes at the close of day. A loud clamor is heard at the outer gate. The Sentry challenges and immediately reports the disturbance to the Captain of the Guards. The Serving Maids rush from the Palace as a Messenger hurries into the court yard. He delivers his message to the Guard, who immediately notifies the Sultan. The Sultan accompanied by the Sultana, and their Retinue, appear before the Palace and he learns that his brother, Shah Zenan, ruler of Samarakand, is nearing the palace. There is much rejoicing over the coming visit. The Guards are summoned and dispatched to meet the Sultan's brother. Shah Zenan, accompanied by his Guards, his Retinue, and his Slave Girls, each bearing a gift for the Sultan, approach and exchange greetings. The Slave Girls, dance for the Sultan, during which he is asked to join Shah Zenan on a hunting expedition. The Sultan agrees and his Huntsmen and Archers are summoned to demonstrate their skill. After the inspection, all join in a hymn and dance to the Diety of the Hunt. After the Hymn the Hunting Party leaves.

The Sultana calls her Retinue about her and in honor of the hunting holiday tells them stories of strange and interesting happenings.

(NOTE.—The stories she tells the Retinue are enacted in the next three Episodes.)

SCENARIO

Sinbad, having been shipwrecked, arrives in a strange tropical country. He is attended by sailors and members of his crew. Natives appear. They believe the strangers are Gods and fall to their knees in worship. The Queen and her retinue appear on the scene. Sinbad offers her a gift salvaged from the wreck. The Queen is greatly impressed and offers Sinbad a seat beside her. Charmed by the strange white man, she proceeds to fall in love with him and offers to make him King. Royal dancers are summoned to perform for the strangers. Sinbad, being a jovial and carefree type, shows interest in the favorite Dancing Girl

SCENARIO

Aladdin, a poor lad, is playing with his friends when a Sorcerer comes to him making mysterious incantations. She hands Aladdin a stick and bids him dig in the ground. He does so and finds an old lamp. Thinking it of no value he throws it down. The Sorcerer informs him that it is of great value. Aladdin starts to clean the lamp and in rubbing it causes a Genii to appear in a puff of smoke. Aladdin is informed that the Genii is his slave and that he has but to rub the lamp and his every wish shall be granted. Aladdin immediately wishes for fine clothes. They are brought to him. He also wishes for a horse. His second wish being granted, he rides along the road where he meets his mother. The mother is much surprised at the new riches of her son. To prove the power of the lamp, he again rubs it and bids the Genii bring his mother a casket of jewels. When she has received them, Aladdin bids her take them to the Emperor of China and ask for the hand of his daughter in marriage. The mother departs and Aladdin rides away to await the outcome of his mother's errand.

SCENARIO

The Emperor, accompanied by his Retinue, comes to the Public Square for the daily judgment of offenders. Prisoners are brought in and some are ordered to be flogged. Aladdin's Mother appears before the Emperor. She asks for the hand of his daughter in marriage with her son and shows the Emperor the casket of jewels to prove her son worthy of the daughter. The Emperor, awed by the richness of the jewels, grants her wish. She starts to bear the good tidings to Aladdin when she is told that she must bring more jewels before her son can marry the Princess. While waiting for her return the Temple Dancers entertain the Emperor. The Mother soon returns with twenty-four Slave Girls, each bearing a casket of jewels. The Slave Girls serenade the Emperor and the Princess. Aladdin comes to claim his bride. The marriage contract is drawn up and a holiday is declared. A Feast of Lanterns and parade follows, during which the Sorcerer again appears disguised as a lamp merchant. The "Merchant" offers "New Lamps for Old," and the Princess' Maid, not knowing the value of Aladdin's lamp, exchanges it for a new one. The sorcerer is delighted to get the wonderful lamp and immediately causes the Genii to appear. The entire Court is ordered to be destroyed by fire. The Fire Dancers enter and the Court is symbolically destroyed.

THE ACTION

1. Chinese Streets.
2. The Entrance of the Emperor and Party.
3. The Judgment of the Prisoners.
4. The Presentation of the Jewels.
5. The Temple Dance.

SCENARIO

Shah Zenan and the Sultan return from the hunting party. The Courtiers are so pleased with the stories told to them by the Sultana that they plead with her to have the characters from the stories re-appear before the Sultan and the Shah. She does this and the Spectacle ends with a grand ensemble of the entire cast.
